Facebook is a social utility that connects people with friends and others who work, study and live around them. People use Facebook to keep up with friends, upload and share photos, create profiles, post links and more. With more than 750 million active users as of June 30, 2012, this member of the social media generation is expected to continue its rapid growth. The site is a venue for people to communicate, look for jobs, buy or sell things and develop new friendships. Facebook news: Facebook has introduced a new feature called 'Facebook Gifts' that will allow your friends to send gifts to each other using the social networking site. Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg said the new feature would help users to connect with one another better and make the company's service more personal. "Gifts on Facebook will make sharing that special moment even easier. It will help us to connect people who don't know each other, and deepen our relationship with those we already care about," he said in a blogpost. "Because they are small and easy to send, gifts can be a great way to show someone you care, and we hope it will be a fun new way to share good moments and spread happiness." The new feature is currently being tested in a closed version of Facebook. 'Facebook Gifts' requires a user to be in a group and their friends to have 'Pending' or 'Scheduled' status. Users can then make the gift card accessible to friends via the 'Unpurchased' section of the website. They can also send links or images to friends. "We're testing the idea of gift cards with a small number of people, and we'll be expanding the test in the coming months," Zuckerberg wrote. Zuckerberg is one of the top 20 richest people in the world with a net worth of more than $8 billion. If you want to try the new feature, you need to be a Facebook user, with the latest version of the application. If you don't have the application installed, it can
